CAREER HISTORY

Scott has worked in the criminal jurisdiction since 1988 and was called to the bar in 1997.

Initially Scott held chambers in Toowoomba where he maintained a general practice including criminal, industrial, family law, succession and family maintenance claims, personal injury advice and proceedings as well as administrative reviews and commercial disputes.

In 2002 Scott moved his practice to Brisbane, however he has continued to receive briefs on a range of matters from regional practitioners and appears regularly in central and northern Queensland. He now predominantly practices in criminal law and has been involved in many high-profile murder cases.

In the past Scott has assisted with the Bar Practice Course, however, more recently has been a presenter at the Criminal Law Conference held in Queenstown each year. At this conference he gives a paper predominantly dealing with criminal law matters. Scott is also a member of the Legal Aid Queensland complex case panel.
